Gentlemen,

Some years ago a friend told me that the 1913 minting of Buffalo five-cent pieces with the animal standing on the "full-mound" were worth considerably more than the others minted in the same year with the animal standing on a mound which is topped with a straight line.

Would you be good enough to advise whether or not your Society buys coins of this sort or forward a catalogue giving prices. At any rate, could you enlighten me as to the worth of this 1913 Buff!

Respectfully,

William M. Ives.

Dear Sir:

Your Buffalo nickel of the first type, showing the ground under the Buffalo, has no especial premium. Everybody saved these, and there are more on the market than there is demand.

Very truly yours,

Curator.
